I've tried using: if (window.PhoneGap) { window.location } else { alert('Please install the PhoneGap'); } in the header file of the app and it works fine. But I need this app to only be accessible from certain websites. For this I have put the following code in the.htaccess file of the website: RewriteCond %{HTTP_USER_AGENT} "iphone|ipod|ipad|android|ios|android|jungle cat|redirector" [NC] RewriteCond %{REQUEST_URI} !^/(.)/|jungle cat|redirector)/[^/]+$ RewriteCond %{REQUEST_URI} !^/(.)|[0-9].$ RewriteRule ^(.) $1.html The problem with this is that it does not actually work because it redirects to the html page when I click on the link in the app but instead of the file. But it does tell me what's wrong with the code. Is there a better way of doing this? Thanks! A: phonegap apps run in a webview and should not be framed|redirected. If you are using phonegap try something like this: "The scales of evolution no longer tip in our favor": a review of the human microbiome and the future of nutrition. The human microbiome is now recognized as an important driver of the functional and structural milieu of the human body. Not only does the microbial population change throughout life, it appears to shape many aspects of our biology, including metabolism, immunity, and development. Accordingly, the human microbiome likely has a significant 2d92ce491b
