

Video Storyline The film opens with a bus accident in which there is only one survivor Vasu. The film flashes forward to six months later to show us that Vasu is now an aspiring actor named Om. At the discovery of Om, the police suspect Vishwas Garewal, but Om convinces them that Vishwas is innocent and the police arrest his brothers, Chulbul and Chottu, who also happen to be his brothers-in-law. They plan to throw them in a lake, but they manage to escape. Om then finds himself as the primary suspect and he makes his way back to his home, where his brother Devkar and his wife Rupa welcome him back. At the house, Om is finally able to tell his story, and the audience finds out that he had been in love with his best friend Meenakshi and that Meenakshi did not return his love. After Om moves out, he continues to search for Meenakshi, but she reveals to him that she loves Vishwas and she is going to marry him. The film ends with Om killing Vishwas, who is being chased by the police. Production The Indian censor board's objections to the film's depiction of Ayodhya were upheld in February 2005. It was allowed to be released on 16 February 2005, but a warning was issued that it should not be screened on public holidays and in schools. After the film's release, the censor board's spokesman said that it had been cleared because of the way in which it depicted the Ayodhya issue. The film was originally to be released on 11 February 2005, but the censor board decided that it would be released in March or April, as it did not want the film released on the public holidays of Holi and Dusshera. The film was banned in Pakistan. Music The song "Tere Mere Pyaar Ki" from the film was dedicated to the then 26-year-old son of Bhim Sen, Ajay Kumar, who had died in a road accident in 1999. Ajay Kumar had become Ajay Raveendra after his marriage. The song was the second song composed by the duo for the film and the song was a runaway success. The song was a hit and it still remains a popular song among the youth today. Reception Rajeev Masand of CNN-IBN gave the film four out of five
